Osaka Bay area – A positive outlook for rent growth potential

Supply/Demand and Vacancy Rate in Osaka Bay Area

Trend of Unit Price Index of Contracted Rents in Osaka Bay Area

Trend of Rising Rent Per Tsubo Prices in Osaka Bay Area

- The vacancy rate for logistics facilities in the Osaka Bay area spiked to nearly 20% as a result of massive supply in 2016 and 2017. While the volume of new supply steeply declined in 2019, demand for high-quality logistics space associated with consumer goods mainly from e-commerce was robustly generated. As a result, the market vacancy rate declined significantly and the unit price index of contracted rents as of the end of 2020 rose by 19% from the 2017 level.
- New supply in the Osaka Bay area in 2021 is expected to remain at approx. half of that in 2020, and the % of tenants pre-leased for large-sized multi-tenant facilities to be newly constructed in 2021 reached 100% as of the end of 2020. Additionally, no new supply is planned in 2022, which means there is no vacancy to be filled up. Thus, LLR expects a positive outlook for rent growth potential in the Osaka Bay Area.

Osaka Bay area – Increasing attention to the proximity to Osaka’s high-consumption areas

Population density is plotted by the Asset Manager, based on data by Statistics Bureau, Ministry of Internal Affairs and Communications “Grid square method in each area (500m)” from “Grid square method research regarding census performed in 2015”

- The Osaka Bay area, which had long been a district full for warehouses for import cargo, has recently been re-evaluated as a hub for last-mile logistics, owing to its proximity to high-consumption areas
- As a result, demand for logistics facilities has been on an increasing trend due to a number of e commerce players and retailers seeking to open their logistic sites for deliveries to consumers
- There are growing needs for logistics facilities for refrigerated and frozen foods released at the Port of Osaka, the largest port of import in western Japan, and delivery to consumption areas
- LOGIPOINT Osaka Bay is located at the heart of the Osaka Bay area, with access to a population of 2.1 million in areas within 30 minutes drive, allowing to serve as a highly accessible delivery hub for consumption areas

ESG initiatives ⑤

DTU (Demographics, Technology, Urbanization) + E (Environmental)

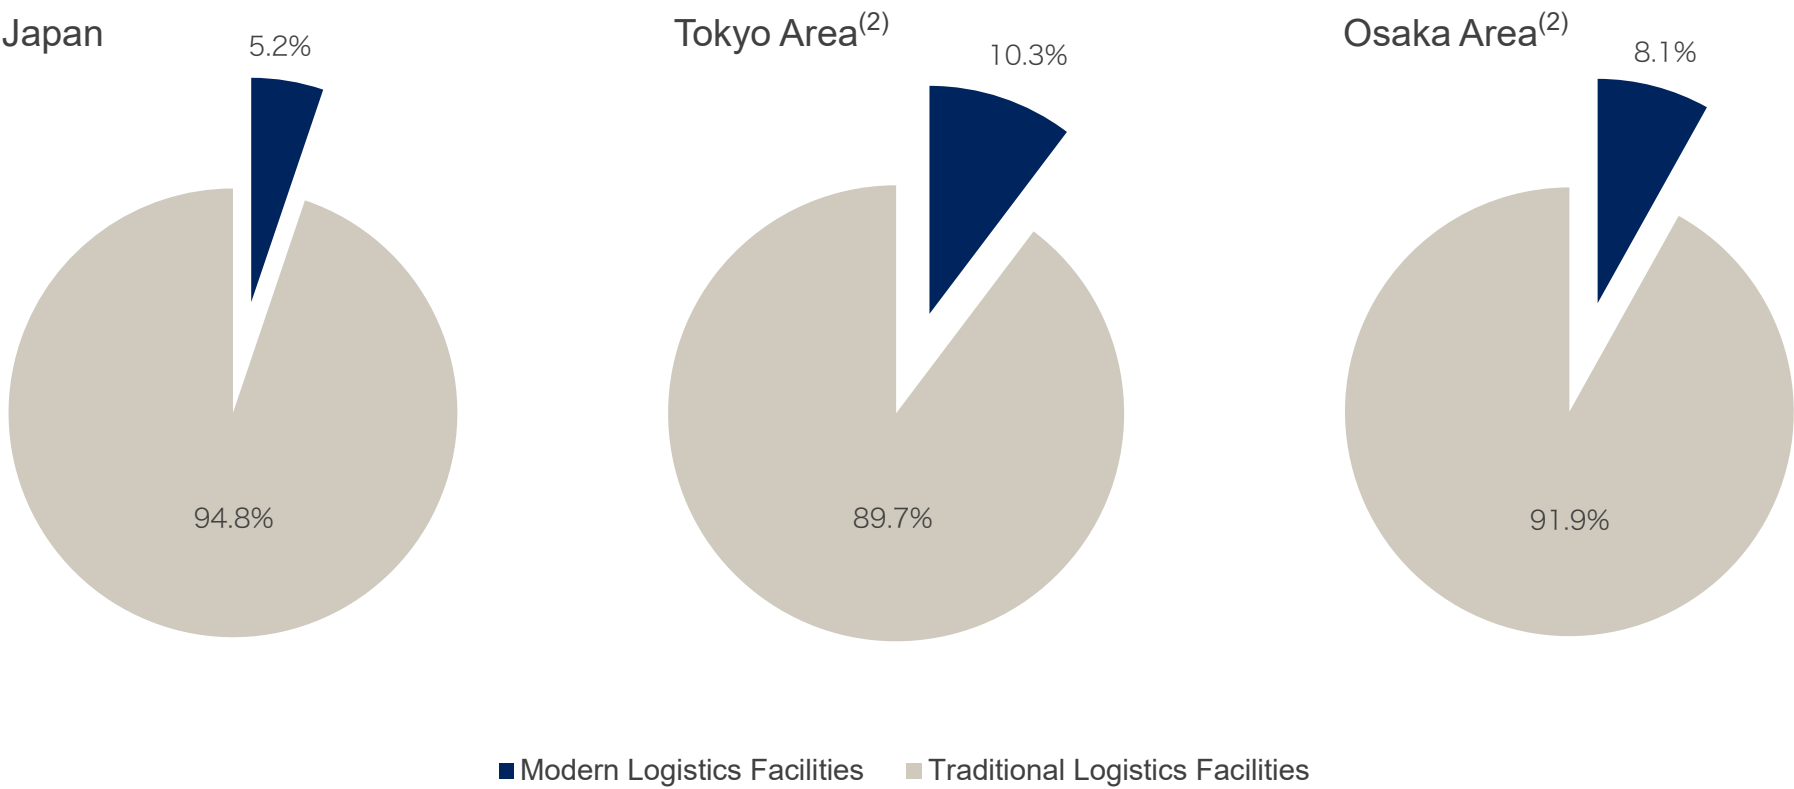

Six years ago, the LaSalle Group decided to undertake focused research on the long term “secular” drivers of real estate. As a result, LaSalle developed the DTU (demographics, technology, urbanization) research program to better understand how fundamental drivers of demand interact. LaSalle’s hypothesis is that these secular drivers have the power to shape real estate markets in ways that supersede and outlast the shorter-term property cycles.

- In 2016, LaSalle added a fourth secular trend for real estate investors to focus on in the next decade and beyond. LaSalle has identified a broad array of environmental factors (“E-factors”) that can contribute to improvements in the risk-adjusted returns of real estate investments.
- E-factors include: energy conservation, carbon footprint reduction, climate change, water and waste recycling, and green building ratings to certify sustainable building design.
- E-factors should be an important consideration in the investment analysis of portfolios and assets. Any real estate financial analysis should take into account the rising demand for the sustainability and resilience features of a building. The rising demand occurs through both regulatory and market forces.
- LaSalle has also been tracking the growing awareness by governments and regulatory bodies to the E-factors. National and local governments both realize that real estate is a major user of energy and water, and that activities inside buildings are major generators of recyclable waste. Therefore, construction and management of the built environment can play a major role in reducing carbon emissions, improving water and energy conservation, and stopping unsustainable waste disposal practices.
- The broader market effects – rising tenant preferences for sustainable, healthy, and flexible spaces for work, social interaction, shopping, leisure, storage/distribution, and residential living spaces – also vary greatly between and within countries.
- By adding “E” to the “DTU” framework, LaSalle is committing to continue to conduct and review rigorous research in order to determine how its clients can benefit from sustainability initiatives.
